

Kettering and Wellingborough Stations

Heritage Team Consultant

We are looking for a talented and dedicated consultant to join our conservation team.

Alan Baxter's work brings together a broad range of conservation, urban design, masterplanning and engineering projects. The practice thrives on a highly interactive culture with varied and challenging projects. As part of this, our widely respected conservation team provides a full range of heritage support for a wide variety of private and public sector clients.

Current projects include Clandon Park for the National Trust, Paddington, St Pancras and Bristol Temple Meads Stations, The Barbican Arts Centre and a range of projects for York Minster and in the wider historic city.

You will join an enthusiastic and supportive team, working together – and alongside our engineers and urban designers – to produce thoughtful and imaginative solutions to a range of stimulating conservation challenges. You will also benefit from a rich programme of training (lectures, events, visits and discussions) to wider your professional and personal horizons, and to provide you with a deep understanding about how historic buildings and places can contribute to a sustainable future.

Candidates should be able to demonstrate a passion for historic buildings and the history of places, and an ability to produce concise written and illustrated work. Experience of the planning system would be beneficial.
